

ABSTRACT

A component with a logic circuit arrangement with configurable functionality, includes several data lines (7), whereby at least a part of the data lines (7) is provided with at least one element (1) which may be switched between two states with different discrete resistances. The data line (7) is opened or closed by the element (1), depending on the switched state.